Update Form for Changes in Directory Listings 113

PART I

PREFACE

The preparation of this directory involved substantial experimentation with different formats. The format utilized attempts to satisfy the following goals:

(1) Comprehensiveness

To compile in one document, as far as is practical, a guide to "who is doing what" in land planning in Montana at all levels of government, the university system, and the private sector.

(2) Delineate Planning Jurisdictions

This is primarily applicable to local government because of the various structural forms land planning can take at the local level under Montana law.

(3) Link Planners Together

Planners generally are not shy about finding out who else is facing problems similar to their own. However, it is clear that there could be more interaction between the different planning "sectors" -- local government planners, state government planners, tribal government planners, federal government planners, university system planning programs, private/corporate planners and private planning consultants. Hopefully, users of this directory will be more fully aware of who their colleagues are throughout the state.

(4) Serve As a Desk Reference

Provide the user with the names, addresses, phone numbers, and (in some cases) explanatory information which will enable the user to contact the desired individual/agency/firm.

(5) Provide More Than Just a Name, Address, and Phone Number

The explanatory information under some listings (e.g. local government planners) is intended to provide basic information about the individual, agency, firm, program, or planning jurisdication. The Talent Inventory Section (Part XIII) is designed to allow users of the directory to contact Montana planners who have specific expertise in the various planning sub-fields.

(6) Enable the Department of Commerce to "Do Its Job"

The Department of Commerce, under 90-1-101(8) and 90-1-103(1), MCA, must respond to requests for information about land planning in Montana. The requests come from a variety of sources: planners themselves, private developers, government officials at all levels, private ciizens, university researchers, professional planning associations, etcetera. Some of these requests involve questions as to who is responsible for land planning in a specific area or specific political jurisdiction within the state. Many requests are necessitated by major development projects (e.g. EIS's for energy projects). The Department of Commerce also receives innumerable requests for "a list" of all Montana Planners. This directory was designed to allow the Department to respond to the tremendous range of requests that the Department receives regarding who is doing what in land planning in Montana. Further, the directory will be "translated" into a mailing list on a Department word processor so that a compatible mailing list of "all" Montana planners will also be available. This will allow the Department to better inform Montana planners of Department activities designed to serve Montana planners as per the Department's responsibility under Montana law.

Anyone who has ever developed a classification system (e.g. directory) knows that it isn't simple to put people into categories. This is especially true regarding land planners. Because Montana law does not embody a professional licensing system which sets standards for planners, the author of this directory has made numerous determinations/assumptions about "who" is a planner. Also, planning organizations and agencies take many structural forms in Montana. The intent was not to judge nor to exclude persons or agencies but to produce a useable practical directory. The author apologizes to any individuals/firms/agencies that were excluded or misrepresented. This directory was compiled by synthesizing several sources of information on Montana planners. Telephone and mail-out surveys were also conducted. Despite these methods, certain organizations or individuals could not be reached. In addition, certain tidbits of information were not obtainable for all listings. The author accepts total responsibility for all errors, omissions, and misjudgments. All such individuals should contact the author to set the record straight.

It should be pointed out that similar directories of land planners are available on a regional and national basis. The only existing (known) regional directory which covers Montana is:

Land Use Planning Directory of the 17 Western States

Produced by Briscoe, Maphis, Murray and Lamont, Inc. under the direction of James E. Dunn, Jr., Land Use Planner, Resource Analysis Branch, Division of Planning Coordination, Engineering and Research Center, U.S. Bureau of Reclamation. (Denver: April 1, 1976)

The American Institute of Certified Planners has published a "Directory of Planning-Related Directories" for use by planners nationwide. The directory references other directories that are available from groups such as the Council of State Planning Agencies and the National Association of Towns and Townships. The cost of the directory is $2.00. For further information contact:

Washington, D.C. 20036
(202) 872-0611

Finally, it is hoped that someone might be able to compile and produce a "second volume" of this series to cover Montana community development officials, redevelopment officials, and economic development officials. The dividing line between land planners and the above mentioned officials is not always clear -- AICP planners may be redevelopment directors, planning boards may conduct redevelopment activities. Persons who are serving in other capacities (such as redevelopment directors) who consider themselves land planners have been listed in this directory under "Other Montana Planners" (Part XI) as per their desires.

PART II

HOW TO USE THIS DIRECTORY

All Montana planners are listed in two ways:

(1) Under the "type" classification (e.g. a city planner is listed under Part IV, Local Government Planners); and

(2) Alphabetically (see Part XII) by name of the individual planner with a page reference back to the listing in the "type" classification (No. 1, above).

Suppose you want to find out who is the planning director for the City of Lewistown, Montana. You look under Part IV, Local Government Planners. You read the introduction to Part IV and find that local government planners are listed geographically by county. Since you do not know which county Lewistown is in, you check the "town by county" table (Part XIV) and find it is in Fergus County. You flip back to the Local Government Planners section and flip to Fergus County. You find that Bill Armold is listed as the planning director.

If you know just the planner's name, you immediately flip to Part XII, Alphabetical Index.

Maybe you just know that Burlington Northern Railroad has a planner, consult Part IX - Private/Corporate Planners.

Please read the introductions to each part. After much trial and error it was decided that no one single format could be used to list all types of planners. For example, local government planners are organized by counties (e.g. political/geographic). The state and federal planners, in contrast, are organized by agency order (bureaucratic structure). Private planning consultants are listed alphabetically by name of firm. Again, all Montana planners are also listed alphabetically in Part XII.

PART III

PROFESSIONAL LAND PLANNING ORGANIZATIONS SERVING MONTANA

INTRODUCTION

The organizations listed provide professional service to Montana planners. The author is not knowledgeable in the field of resource planning professional organizations. Additions to this section would be welcome. The listings are alphabetical.

American Planning Association (APA)

The APA is "the" national professional planning association. The APA offers many services to American planners. The APA:

* Provides professional development opportunities.
* Publishes several planning periodicals.
* Conducts workshops.
* Offers a technical information/library service. (Planners Advisory Service)
* Conducts research.
* Lobbies for planning interests.
* Publishes quality planning books.

APA provides opportunities for interaction in various planning specialities (e.g. energy planning, environmental planning, small town and rural planning) environmental planning, small town and rural planning) through APA's various "planning divisions".

The American Institute of Certified Planners (AICP) is the professional institute of APA. AICP members carry the mark of qualified professionals. To be certified by the AICP, the individual must meet rigorous standards and pass an examination.

For further information about APA contact:

Montana APA members are now part of the new APA (local) organization known as the Western Central Chapter of APA. The new Western Central Chapter is a regional organization which provides linkage to national APA activities.

Montana Association of Planners (MAP)

The Montana Association of Planners (MAP) represents Montana planners in a variety of professional capacities. MAP members include all facets of the planning community in Montana -- local government planners, planning board members, planning consultants, developers, state government planners, downtown development directors, zoning officials, university staff and planning students. MAP membership includes a subscription to The Western Planner, a periodic journal which covers planning throughout the West. MAP members also receive a subscription to MAP News, a quarterly newsletter which provides timely information about planning in Montana. MAP sponsors two training oriented planning conferences annually. MAP lobbies for planning interests at the Montana Legislature and promotes planning interests statewide. MAP sponsors special projects designed to promote community land planning, land conservation, and quality land development in Montana.

Montana Technical Council

The Montana Technical Council is a professional "umbrella" organization which represents the following land use design organizations:

1. American Institute of Architects (Montana Chapter)
2. American Society of Civil Engineers
3. Billings Architectural Association
4. Consulting Engineers Council of Montana
5. Great Falls Society of Architects
6. American Society of Landscape Architects
7. Montana Association of Planners
8. Montana Association of Registered Land Surveyors
9. Montana Society of Engineers
10. Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers

Representing all design professionals in Montana, the Technical Council provides a vehicle for cooperation and coordination between the related professionals. The Technical Council also lobbies on issues of concern to the related design professions at the Montana Legislature.

The Technical Council employs a permanent staff person. For further information contact:

The Western Planner Organization

The Western Planner is a periodic journal published in Cheney, Washington. The phenomenal popularity of the journal reflects the hunger of western planners for a forum which professionally addresses the often unique problems of planning in the West. The skillful managing editor, Stan Steadman, routinely publishes a pertinent, tightly-written, periodical which provides practical solutions to common planning problems from a practioner's viewpoint. The Western Planner focuses on planning activities within eight member western states, including Montana.

The Western Planner organization is an "umbrella" organization which is sponsored by the professional planning organizations within the eight member western states. The organization sponsors an annual regional planning conference each summer.

PART IV

LOCAL GOVERNMENT PLANNERS
(TOWN PLANNERS, CITY PLANNERS, COUNTY PLANNERS)

INTRODUCTION

Local government structure for planning varies widely in Montana. State law allows many different types of local government planning boards. A county may have several separate planning boards operating within its borders (e.g. Gallatin and Flathead Counties). Some local governments do not have planning boards. Some local governments have an official -- in addition to governing body officials -- who reviews subdivision plats and, essentially, serves as the planner.

Staffing patterns for planning boards/planning functions also take many forms such as:

1. Planning boards without professional, paid planning staff;
2. Professional, paid planning staff without planning boards;
3. Planning boards with professional, paid planning staff; and
4. Planning boards utilizing the services of private professional planning consultants as staff (the consultant may provide all or partial staff services).

Finally, planners may be an "official" planning director serving a planning board or they may be a "multi-purpose" official who wears many hats (e.g. sanitarian/planner, clerk/planner, surveyor/planner, city manager/planner). Local government staff persons who administer the Montana Subdivision and Platting Act were included as planners since this function is typically part of the responsibility of a Montana planning office.

The format used in this part was developed after grappling with the problem of how to develop a consistent, comprehensive format which would be as easy to use as possible given all the above noted differences in local government planning in Montana.

Lay members of planning boards and zoning commissions were not listed due to the tremendous task of updating these lists, turnover problems and because most day-to-day contacts must be directed to planning staff. Where a planning board exists without staff the phone is listed for the appropriate planning contact person: the city clerk or county clerk and recorder, the planning board president, the board secretary or other person. Information about planning board members or zoning commission members can be obtained from planning staff or from city clerks or county clerk and recorders.

Private planning consultants are listed when the consultant serves as "permanent staff" (as opposed to a "one-shot" 45 day contract) although, admittedly, the dividing line may be unclear. Also note that all private Montana planning consultants are listed in Part VIII.

Note that "local government" as it is used here denotes only general purpose local governments -- incorporated cities and towns and counties. For planners serving special districts (e.g. County Sewer and Water District or school systems) which are technically also local governments -- see Part XI, Other Montana Planners.

Organization is by county. All planning organizations within the county are listed. If there is more than one planning organization in the county, each organization is listed alphabetically. If you know the city or town, but do not know the name of the county, consult the "town by county" conversion table (Part XIV) of this directory. Note that the "town by county" table includes unincorporated "towns" as well as incorporated cities and towns. County seat cities, in parentheses, are listed following name of the county in the headings. County headings are alphabetical.

PART VI

STATE GOVERNMENT PLANNERS

INTRODUCTION

As in local government, land planning activities in state government take many forms. No single state agency has total responsibility for all land planning activities in Montana. Agencies often employ planners to implement agency land/resource/community development programs or projects. Specialized planners (transportation planners, health facility planners) are also scattered throughout many state agencies.

As in local government, state government has both:

1. Persons actually doing land planning; and

2. Persons who are professionally trained and/or professionally experienced planners now serving the state in a job more distant to what is traditionally considered land planning (e.g. grant administration).

Again, it is the intention of this directory to be nonjudgmental. Persons in both of the above categories were listed in accordance with their wishes.

Where appropriate, brief descriptions of state land planning related programs are listed.

State government is being reorganized all the time. Land planning functions remain in state government, although names, programs, and agencies change. To keep current, the only real state government "guidebook" is the Montana State Government Telephone Directory which is published annually. To obtain a copy, contact:

PART VIII

PRIVATE PLANNING CONSULTANTS

INTRODUCTION

Montana has many private consulting firms which provide their clients with land planning services. Some consultants, especially large firms, provide a multitude of professional services of which land and community planning is but one service. Other consultants are specialists in one or more fields (e.g. municipal parking analysis, development permit systems, subdivision analysis, downtown redevelopment). Still other consultants are broad based generalists who pick up planning contracts occasionally as well as the other types of contracts which provide the mainstay of their livelihood. Again, this directory lists all consultants involved in land planning as per the consultant's preference. New or reorganized firms should contact the author for listing when this directory is updated in the future.

Some consultants are listed both in this part of the directory and in the local planning section (Part IV).

Organization of this part is alphabetical by firm and/or individual name. Where a firm employs more than one professional planner, all professional planners are listed.

PART XIV

INCORPORATED MUNICIPALITIES AND
UNINCORPORATED "TOWNS" BY COUNTY

INTRODUCTION

The following conversion table is useful in locating the name of the county if you only know the name of the municiplity or unincorporated "town". Since local government planners are listed in Part IV by county, this conversion table helps the reader to access Part IV.

The cities and towns with an asterisk following the name are incorporated municipalities. All "towns" without an asterisk are not incorporated.
